A man came up the mountain to Woodedge, a charcoal burner from Firm. "My wife Nesty sends a message to the wise women," he said, and the villagers showed him Ayo's house. As he stood in the doorway he made a hurried motion, a fist turned to an open palm. "Nesty says tell you that the crows are flying early and the hound's after the otter," he said. "She spoke with the other breath," Azver said. Witchery was restricted to women. All magic practiced by women was called "base craft," even when bold and graceful, her head carried high. "What will you have us call you?" "Tell us who you are," the white-haired man said, courteously enough, but without greeting or think of using magic to free himself or stop the men's brutality. He flung himself at them and round his neck. Medra. "Of course," he said, his smile growing brilliant. So then you wait. You open your mind up, like. Like opening the doors. The belief that a wizard must be celibate was unquestioned for so many centuries that it probably came to be a psychological fact. Without this bias of conviction, however, it appears that the connection between magic and sexuality may depend on the man, the magic, and the circumstances. The young man slept on a pallet under the little west window of Dulse's house for three years. He learned wizardry, fed the chickens, milked the cow. He suggested, once, that Dulse keep goats. He had not said anything for a week or so, a cold, wet week of autumn. He said, "You might keep some goats." Dulse had been unable to answer at all for a while. He would rather have dealt."It'll stop by midday," the wizard told the chickens. He fed them and squelched back to the house with three warm eggs. When he was a child he had liked to walk in mud. He remembered enjoying the cool of it rising between his toes. He still like to go barefoot, but no longer enjoyed mud; it was sticky stuff, and he disliked stooping to clean his feet before going into the house. When he'd had a dirt floor it hadn't mattered, but now he had a wooden floor, like a lord or a merchant or an archmage. To keep the cold and damp out of his bones. Not his own notion. Silence had come up from Gont Port, last spring, to lay a floor in the old house. They had had one of their arguments about it. He should have known better, after all this time, than to argue with Silence..The Kargish version of the story, told as a sacred recital by the priesthood, says that Intathin.Standing on that hill, Medra had said, "There is a vein of water, just under where I stand, that will not go dry." It's a strong spirit on Roke: always to do better than the others, always to be first... The art becomes a contest, a game. The end becomes a means to an end less than itself... There was no man there more greatly gifted than this man, yet if any did better than he in any thing, he found it hard to bear. It frightened him, it galled him.. "Mistress," said Hawk, "may I tell you a story?". "Of
