hollow cavern and the lode of cinnabar. Hound was sorry for him. "You know, if it was Gelluk questioning you, he'd have everything you." If somebody could talk to her people there, they'd get word to her. Her brother, Littleash, used to conic to the city every year or two." Ayo and Mead were much alike, and Otter saw in them what Anieb might have been: a short, slight. A man with a deep, clear voice spoke: "It's not our judgment that prevails, but the Rule of Roke. The evil reputation magic had gained during the Dark Time, however, continued to cling to many of the practices of sorcerers and witches. Women's powers were particularly distrusted and maligned, the more so as they were conflated with the Old Powers." "It would be a terrible long way," said Mead. "Then you'll be more than welcome. The plague is terrible among the cattle. And getting worse." time to time, and then shut his eyes. Dragonfly found the village witch taking maggots out of an infected cut on a sheep's rump. The he was ten years old. He had been afraid of them, the women that shouted at him to get out of the "Medra," she said. Her sore mouth could not speak clearly. He knelt down and took her hands, looking into her face. The light went with her. He was alone in the dark. The cold grip of the spells took him by the. Although Otter had not thought the words, Anieb spoke with his voice, the same weak, dull voice: "It means only hurt. Hate, pride, greed." Medra stayed three years with Highdrake, and when the old mage died, the Lord of Pendor asked Medra to take his place. Despite his ranting and scolding against dragon hunters, High-drake had been honored in his island, and his successor would have both honor and power. Perhaps tempted to think that he had come as near to Morred's Isle as he would ever come, Medra stayed a while longer on Pendor. He went out with the young lord in his ship, past the Toringates and far into the West Reach, to look for dragons. There was a great longing in his heart to see a dragon. But untimely storms, the evil weather of those years, drove their ship back to Inगत three times, and Medra refused to run her west again into those gales. He had learned a good deal about weatherworking since his days in a catboat on Havnor Bay. want to stay alive. I'll see that you're sent there. Spring came late again that year, cold and stormy. Medra set to boat-building. By the time the peaches flowered, he had made a slender, sturdy deep-sea boat, built according to the style of Havnor. He called her Hopeful. Not long after that he sailed her out of Thwil Bay, taking no companion with him. "Look for me at the end of summer," he said to Ember. summon them, in spirit or in flesh, to come to us. Only the dead may we summon. Only the shadows. He let that sink in for a while, and then continued softly, "And to work the spell of semblance on you, to make it so complete and deep that the Masters of Roke will see you as a man and nothing else, to do that, I too must know your name." He paused again. As he talked it seemed to him that everything he said was true, and his voice was moved and gentle as he said, "I could have known it long ago. But I chose not to use those arts. I wanted you to trust me enough to tell me your name yourself." And it was in these discussions that the school on Roke began. So it was. For the rest of his life, Medra kept the doors of the Great House on Roke. The garden. "Destroy us? Destroy this hill? The trees there?" She looked down to a grove of trees not far from the hill. "Maybe Segoy who made them could unmake them. Maybe the earth will destroy herself. Maybe she'll destroy herself through our hands, in the end. But not through yours. "But you can? Right? You really can? No," she whispered, as if to herself, "you are not. That's all he really told me, yet," said Dragonfly, coming back to the mild, overcast spring day. A red stripe passed across her face. He looked at her, that vivid, fierce, dark face in its rough cloud of hair. The man whose name was Medra sat in the mud with the dead woman in his arms and wept. They walked without light except for the faint werelight Gelluk sent before them. They went through long-disused levels, yet the wizard seemed to know every step, or perhaps he did not know the way and was wandering without heed. In the Archipelago, the lore of the Old Powers was still part of the profound, common basis of thought and reverence. On all the islands, the arts mostly practiced by witches, such as midwifery, healing, animal husbandry, dousing, mining and metallurgy, planting and growing spells, love spells, and so on, often invoked or drew upon the Old Powers. But the learned wizards of Roke had generally come to distrust the ancient practices and made no appeal to the "Powers of the Mother." Only in Paln did wizards combine the two practices, in the arcane, esoteric, and reputedly dangerous Pelnish Lore..the dragons came to raid among the western lands, and wizards went out in vain against them. Wizards trained at the school went to other islands of the Archipelago to work against warlords, pirates, and feuding nobles, preventing raids and forays, imposing penalties and settlements, enforcing boundaries, and protecting individuals, farms, towns, cities, and shipping, until social order was re-established. In the early years they were sent to enforce peace; increasingly they were called on to maintain it. While the throne in Havnor remained empty, for over two hundred years Roke School served effectively as the central government of the Archipelago..Scattered references and tales from Gont and the Reaches, passages of sacred history in the Kargad Lands and of arcane mystery in the Lore of Paln, long ignored by the scholars of Roke, relate that in the earliest days dragons and human beings were all one kind. Eventually these dragon-people separated into two kinds of being, incompatible in their habits and desires. Perhaps a long geographical separation caused a gradual natural divergence, a differentiation of species. The Pelnish Lore and the Kargish legends maintain that the separation was deliberate, made by an agreement known as verw nadan, Vedurman, the Division..there; a half-month to go, another to return; he would be back well before the Fallows at the."And I in my tower," said the Namer.
